Most of the employers love to hire qualified people. Sustained involvement in more than one activity reflects the talent and potential of the student. Hiring officials look for these talents in people. While pursuing these activities in university along with education, students learn prioritization and time management skills too. These academically and co-circularly talented students have well-groomed personality, which helps them to face the world in a better way.

Extracurricular activities increase opportunities for social interaction and new relationship development. These activities teach students how to work for a common goal and this ultimately develops a sense of responsibility in them. It increases the level of confidence and also teaches them how to co-operate and work with people in different conditions. They learn to face the challenges that come in education and career.

As most of these activities are group-oriented, which have students from different niches, which give them a chance to more know about people of different passions and cultures. Besides this, they can also find clubs or groups that share similar social, religious or even entertainment interest for socialization. Interact with people from different backgrounds help in the development of interpersonal skills of students.
